WILL HAVE A TRIAL.

Frederick's Trial Set for Next Monday. The jury and trial set for next Monday. Will be on hand Ready for the Trial.

It was thought for awhile that this special trial set for next Monday to try Fred Burgess would be postponed, and the fact that Attorney Geo. N. W. would be at Calhoun at that time to conduct the trial of Kerkick. Judge M. C. Brown, of Henderson, has been appointed by the Governor to try Kerkick, and the day for that trial has been set for the fourth Monday in this month, Commonwealth's Attorney, N. W. Brown, to County Attorney, Felix, that both he and Judge Little will be here on time for the trial, and that it will most certainly be held. Several witnesses are under bond for their appearance here next Monday. The Burgess case has been on the docket so long that many have almost forgotten the murder of old man Harris at Boone four years ago. Judge Burgess, Fred's brother, is now writing a sentence in the State Penitentiary, having been convicted of being accessory to the crime, at the November term of court, 1888.

At this time of the year when the river is full of ice, and many of their possessions on the water with an eagle eye. Sillence & Moore came very near losing a fine batch of logs this morning. A party said to be from Breckinridge county passed down the river with a raft of logs. Just below the bridge at this place their raft was stuck in the ice. Sillence & Moore were told that the raft was stuck, and they went to the bank, and looked right or ten fine log boats. After dropping down a short distance they made fast the extra logs to their raft. They were unloaded by two or three different parties they passed, and left the logs as they belonged to Sillence & Moore. This they thought did, and tied the logs to a stump on the bank. Sillence & Moore are naturally increased at the attempt to take their logs, which are worth on the market about $1000. STABBED IN THE THROAT.

A Young Man While Bridling His Horse Was Killed. A Cut by a Dangerous Adversary.

A sad cutting affair occurred three or four miles from Greenville, N. W. on Sunday night, and may result in something quite serious before the morning. A young man, named Clark, a young man, went to the stable just after dark to bridle his horse, preparatory to going to see his best girl, with whom he had an engagement that night. While in the stable some one seized him in a powerful grip and made a partially successful effort to strike him through. A hand to hand fight ensued and Clark's adversary finally broke himself to flight, and that, too, before Clark found out who his would-be assassin was. Dr. J. J. Simon, of Greenville, was hastily summoned and dressed the wound, which he pronounced to be not nearly so dangerous as it might seem.

MURDER AT CENTRAL CITY.

A Woman Killed by a Bullet Aimed at Another.

News comes of a fatal shooting at Central City, last Saturday night. A woman named Clark, who was from Greenville, seemed to be a home of contention between the men. One coveted her presence, and the other desired to share the questionable affections of the dusky lady. One of the men, named Clark, "burned off," so to speak by the other for while, got tired of his tomes and asked the woman to come to his home and live with him. She, in reply, by willing to play fast and loose between them, replied that she would come to his home, but he must first get her out of the way.
